

NATIONAL PUBLIC SCHOOL KENGERI, BENGALURU
REPORT ON GRADE 6 A CLASS ASSEMBLY

“You must give to get, you must sow the seed, before you can reap the harvest.”
— SCOTT REED

Harvest festivals are celebrated in many parts of the world to mark the end of the agricultural season and the gathering of crops. These festivals hold great importance as they reflect humanity’s deep connection with nature and agriculture, which form the backbone of life and civilization.

With this thought, the students of Grade VI A conducted their assembly in the third week of January 2026, on the topic ‘Harvest Festivals of India.’ The assembly highlighted the hard work of farmers, invoking gratitude for nature’s abundance and also the importance of thankfulness, unity, and respect for the food we consume. They presented a brief introduction on Makara Sankranti that symbolizes new beginnings, prosperity, and gratitude to nature on 14th January. The festival is celebrated in different ways across regions, reflecting India’s rich cultural diversity. They stressed on the significance of harvest festivals celebrated across India, such as Pongal, Makar Sankranti, Bihu, Baisakhi, and Onam.

A short speech emphasized how these festivals reflect India’s agrarian roots and express gratitude towards nature and farmers. A skit was presented conveying the message of farmers’ gratitude to nature- the sun, rain, soil, and the divine for a successful harvest. To remind people that food is not produced by human effort alone but is a gift of nature that must be respected. The cultural segment included a vibrant dance performance of different states, which beautifully portrayed rural life and the joy of harvest. Harvest festivals also teach important values. They promote sharing, generosity, and humility.

The students presented the importance of nature, seasonal cycles, and sustainable living emphasising that harvest festivals are not just celebrations of crops but celebrations of life, culture, and harmony between humans and nature, reminding us to be thankful, united, and responsible towards the environment that sustains us.
